Mother Earth is changing. The planet seems to be in the midst of one disaster after another. Last week, Florida faced unanticipated destruction by Hurricane Wilma. Connections to families and friends and reports of damage have trickled in as electricity returns. It has not been easy and the path ahead is one that will take many turns.

Change is constant and something I do not resist, always in awe of knowing that the unexpected lies around the corner. Many of you know me as a Floridian, which I have been for almost 20 years. Others know me as a native Pennsylvanian, having spent my formative years in the countryside of Allentown, PA. This month I will be relocating my home and business headquarters to Allentown. Family and life-long friendships proved irresistible, and the move is exciting for me.

My presence in Florida will remain much the same, with frequent trips for lectures and meetings. I look forward, however, to expanding my business presence in the Northeast and reconnecting with those of you in that area.

I had planned to announce the Grand Opening of Florida Atlantic University's Christine E. Lynn College of Nursing in this issue. The building is complete, but the official opening ceremony was delayed by Wilma. My position on the design team as the Feng Shui/Building Biology consultant for the past three years has been a rewarding experience. Dean Boykin is a beacon of light, bringing her vision of healing to the classroom halls. The building literally wraps around a healing garden with labyrinth and sacred place, making a strong statement for future nurses.

Other projects are springing forward that will incorporate Feng Shui and LEED™ (U.S. Green Building) Certifications. This is a wonderful benefit of my field, the opportunity to help people create environments that touch lives with hope of making positive changes for all.

We are at the beginning of a natural time of year for going within. Daylight Savings Time forces us to spend more time indoors, and we begin to focus on giving thanks with Thanksgiving Day around the corner. The unprecedented changes in our planet give me pause to reflect on our abilities to honor the earth, the environment and her inhabitants. Our solidarity is needed to help those affected by natural and man-made disasters. My sincere prayers are with all of you, with hopes for peace, safety and recovery.

I hope you enjoy the new format of my newsletter, and my gratitude goes to Springboard Strategies for assisting me in the many changes ahead!

With thoughts of peace,

Carol Cannon

Success Secrets: Feng Shui for Your Business

Feng Shui and Building Biology can assist in site selection for new commercial buildings. Look for sites with complementary neighbors, square or rectangular shapes, no visible high-tension power lines, and no streets ending in a “T” at your site. Avoid sites with buildings that tower over your site or have sharp angles pointing toward it. Consider the compatibility of your Four Pillars and Ming Gua to the land type and direction that your building will face.

America Recycles Day

November 15, 2005

My move will happen right around this special day, and there is something comforting about participating in the recycling process by taking only what I need and donating everything else to friends and charity. Friends have shown up at my door with boxes and newspapers, and my friend Pat even showed up to pack -- I wouldn't have been able to do this without her. Not only am I recycling packing materials, but saving $$ too! Please join me in finding new ways to help our planet by Reducing, Reusing and Recycling.
